The decorations were at once novel, simple, and effective. On the first landing of the stair ase was an outrigger, among pot plants, with the sculls crossed on the wall. On one of the walls of the drawing room was a large devine composed of various orioket paraphernalia and sculls, surrounded by the initial letters of the respective dubs. St. George's Hall and St. Andrew's Hall shields bearing cricketing devices and flags were arranged round the walls. CHARGE OF LANCENY AGAINST A SOLDIER C. Weagebury, 26, a private in the Northamptonshire Regiment, was charged with stealing a coat, value $10, the property of Mr. Bolim, residing at Windsor House, Queen's Road Central, on the 25th inst.

Paul Bohm said he was the manager of Windsor House, and on the evening of the 25th, he hung his cont on a peg in the hall as usual About 10 p.m. he heard some one in the hall, and discovered the defendant with the cost upon his arm. He asked him what he wanted and defendant not being able to give him a reason for baving possession of the coat, he sent for the police and gave him in obarge. P.C. Fook Sing, 543, said he was on duty in Queen's Road Contral, on the 25th, About 10 p.m. a Chinaman came up to him and told him is master wanted him. He then went to the complainant's house, and the defendant was given in charge. He was under the influence of liquor. The defendant said in his defence that he had been in company with an officer from about ! p.m. and they witnessed the Cricket Malch and on leaving him, the officer asked him to call on him at room No. 19 in the house which he understood to be the complainant's. He called at the house, and receiving to answer to his remated knookings he went up the stairs to the first landing to see if he could find any person who might show him the room he wanted. He saw which hung on a peg, and it fell down. Whilst in the act of hanging it up again, the complainant rushed out of a room, and accused him of stealing the cost. He wanted to explain how the case happened but complainant would. bear him. . He had no intention of stenling such the following statement regarding the loss of that vessel: - We were bound from Singapore to Hamburg with a general cargo. Our crew consisted of forty-five hands all told-ten British and the rest Bengalers and Chinaman. The collision occurred in a dense fog on the 16th Decomber. I had been on duty continuously, not having had my clothes off or laid down since the 14th. I went down below about ton minutes pafore the canualty conserved. The vessel had been going at half sheet from seven o'clock to ten o'clock on the 15th, when she was stopped and soundings were taken. She was then put: dead slow, which lasted until 'n masthead and rol light were soon by Mr. Nicola, the chief officer on the bridge, right about. The steamer soomed to be going on at full speed, and in a few seconds she struck our vessel on the port side just by the stokeminutes of the last annual meeting, which had frame and every secretion of the body in the hold, making a sliding blow and coming into the engine-room about four feet; smushing over fifteen feet of the side in above and below our water-line. The engine-room and stekeholds filled immediately, drowning two Bengales firemen. We warm able to make the books, andwhen we found the other steamer was sinking. got out three more -the latter to save the erowds in the other ship. One mon rewed these boats in a tolerably calm sea to the Lecritam, by the erow and passongers of which they were filled. We hang on to the other ressel by m ans of lines as she continued to float, and six boats belonging to the Legidam we got out and used. Just before dayling about five a.m., I sent word that I had six feet of water in the hold. The captain of the Leerdam answered that he could still float for an hour. Thear from India a sad tale illustrating the way in which officers of the P.W.D. are sometime ruthlessly overworked. By some unusual chance the Public Works Department office had come into the possession of a coffin. It was second hand—that is to say, its owner had no need for it, as he had changed his mind and regovered before he could put the coffin to any procedual use. At first its existence came before the Examiner of Accounts as a collin, but, as the Examiner could not see what the P.W D. wanted with a coffla, he refused to pass the pharge. There was a good deal of discussion over the matter in the office, and next year it was sent up as "tools and plant," The Examiner detected the imposition, was very angry, and again sen! back the bill. During the third year the officials hit upon a happy plan. They indicated in the office and used it as an indicate. As such, therefore, it turned up once ore in the accounts, but so disguised as "ofcial forniture" that the Examiner did not suspect the fraud, and the coffin new remains there as a fixture.

At longth the King stopped his coach, and called to him. "How do you do, Goupée ?" said the King, and after a few other questions asked him if he had enough to live upon. "Little enough. indeed," replied Goupée; "and as I once took your Majesty out of prison, I hope you will not let me go to one." His Majesty ordered him a pension of a guinea a week, but he did not live to enjoy it more than a few months.

errespondent of the Queen writes: -Although, as a rule, I do not think salmon fishing is so suitable a sport for woman as either that for trout or other fish that may be caught with fly, there have been, and are, ladies gaite proficients in the art. Certainly the one who, in 1867, killed a 33lb. fish in the Spey, after a two hours contest, must-not only have been skilful, but strong and energetic likewise. This feat, as one of endurance, was, however, surpassed a couple of years later by a lady angler in Wales, when fishing the Elan, a tributary of the Wye. A correspondent of the Field, writing from Ashburton, New Zealand, says ;- "We seldom hear of Boniface studying entomology. Nevertheless, the Colony of Victoria can at least claim one who has for many years domesticated spiders and observed their habits. While lately in the Colony, I was informed of some curious work done by spiders to be seen in the bar of the W.A.O.D. Hotel, at Eltham, four on miles north of Melbourne. I occasionally passed through the village, and made several visits to see them, and invariably found host Mr. Purcell who is a genial and massive specimen of his class, ready for a 'pitch 'about his spiders. On entering the bar, the visitor will notice what at first sight appear to be some large bams suspended from the roof; but on a closer inspection they are seen to be a number of compact boughs tied together, and finely woven over with spiders' webs of the purest whiteness. Mr. Purcell informed me that many years while termented with great hosts of flies, he bung up several of these next bundles of boughs as resting-places for them. In a short time the spiders took possession, and have since continued to do good service in reducing the number of flies which swarm into the bar during the greater part of the year. There are from twenty to forty spiders in each group, the shaded entrance to each other's dwellings giving their work a very pleasing effect, but the older bundles are completely hidden in the shining mass of pure white alky webs. Perhaps the same experiment would afford pleasure to others who may think well to try it in other parts of the world."

The British Australasian writes :- "The British Empire comprised, until a few weeks Alfordet ... | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | ago, about 9,420,120 squere miles, of which Australasia. New Guinea, and other islands contributed 3.200,000. Since than H.M.S. Egeria has proved herself a veritable anapper up of unconridered trifles; for she has declared a British pro-tectorate over no less than thirteen additional islands in the South Pacific. viz., Bowditch, Dake of Clarence, and Dake of York, islands in the Union Group, and Enderbey, Mary, Phonix, Herney, Gardner, McKean Hull, Sydney, Baker, and Howland islands in the Phoenix Group. Our Gallio friends are sure to be enraged at this. Already the New Caledonian journals are urging the French Government to take pessession of New Hebrides. ' because in that case all the d colonies lying between that group of France. She would be mistress of the navigation | Sarometerof Oceans, and would hold the key of Australia in Temperature her hand. Supposing she hesitates to annex Humidity that archipelago 'England,' it is argued, 'would occupy them at the first slarm of war, and New Weather Caledonia would be closed in an iron ring, of which Rain Australia, New Galdes the New Hebrides, Fiji and New Zealand would constitute the various segments. In that event, moreover, the capture by Great Britain of New Caledonia, Tahiti the Marquesas, and the Gambier Archipelago would be only a question of time; and over an area of 10,000 nantical miles England would be the undisputed mistress of the seas. All very good reasons for England insisting that the existing New Hebrides Convention should be scrapulously respected, at least until the pear is rips enough to fall into the grasp of the future mistress of the Pasific La belle Australianne."
